MR. AND MRS. J. E. WOOLDRIDGE

Retires From Railway

After more than 39 years as painter and paint foreman for the Norfolk and Western Railroad, J. E. Wooldridge, of Route 635, four miles south of Appomattox spent his first week of retirement last week working!

Tobacco harvesting, a bit of other farming, and offers of paint jobs are already keeping this long time railroad man busily occupied.

Wooldridge finished his last period for N and W on Friday, August 31 at Brookneal. Just prior to that he supervised the outside painting of the Appomattox station.

Mr. Wooldridge first joined the N and W "Bridges and Buildings" crew in 1923. Thereafter he and his workers painted bridges, railroad signs, stations, and crossing gates.

In the old days the painters "mixed their own" with white lead and linseed oil. "Now", says Mr. Wooldridge, "ready — mixed paint and spraying equipment take care of all that."

Except for a few years spent in Evergreen, Mr. and Mrs. Wooldridge have lived on or near their present location in the Southside District.

The Wooldridges have four children and four grandchildren, all living close by. They are Miss Rosa Mae Wooldridge, John Lawson Wooldridge, also with N and W., Mrs. Vivian Caldwell and Mrs. Hazel Guill who lives at home with her two children, Suzanne, 12, and Cindy, 5. The John Lawson Wooldridges have two sons, Jimmy 11, and Gary, 8.

Mrs. Wooldridge regrads her home as a "garden spot" and a "happy place to be". Both Mr. and Mrs. Woolridge are looking forward to living more leisurely. They enjoy good health on their small farm and live in a solid-built nine room home constructed with logs right from their own property.

Their church interests are concerned mainly with the Evergreen Baptist and the Evergreen Methodist Church.

Said they when interviewed last Friday, "We enjoy life . . . We enjoy our children and our many friends."
